Cures all Pain in Man and Beast
TESTIMONIALS:

PROLAPSUS UTERI (Falling of the Womb.) A Wonderful Cure.—Nine years my wife suffered with this terrible complaint. She was attended by doctor after doctor, went to the different hospitals where females are treated; tried them all; wore bandages and pessaries with only temporary relief. Her life was miserable. We applied Dr. Giles' Liniment. Her relief was immediate. She is now well.
B. McDERMOTT,
40 West 13th street, New York.

I had twelve strokes of Paralysis. My leg, arm and tongue were useless; was obliged to use a catheter every day. Doctor Giles' Liniment Iodide of Ammonia has cured me. Will answer any inquiries so that all afflicted may know of it.
JOHN APPEL, North Branford, Conn.

Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, April 22, '76.
W. M. Giles, Esq., Dear Sir—I used your Iodide of Ammonia Liniment on Flora Temple's hind pastern joint. She had been quite lame; the effect was wonderful; she walks now quite well. Very respectfully yours,
A. WELCH.
P. S.—I am now using it on Littleton's right fore leg.

ASTHMA—The tortures and agonies I endured for six years, none but those who have suffered with this terrible disease can know. My life was miserable. In desperation I tried Giles' Liniment Iodide of Ammonia. It gave me instant relief. Used it internally as well as externally.
THOS. BRANIGAN,
127 west 27th street, New York.

I was in a dreadful condition. Joints swollen, pain intense. Injections of morphine into my veins failed to relieve me. Giles' Iodide of Ammonia took away the deposits from my joints. I want every one who suffers to know what will cure them.
FORDYCE LOTHROP,
North Hyde Park, Lamoille co. Vt.

Another Sufferer cured.—Discharged from the Massachusetts General Hospital as incurable, with inflammatory rheumatism in my shoulders, fingers and feet; suffered fearfully for three years, tried everything; lost all hope. Dr. Giles' Liniment Iodide of Ammonia effected a complete cure.
ELLEN SMITH,

No tongue can tell what I have suffered for the past 30 years from [illegible] and [illegible] FITS. At times so bad that I could not stand upon my feet. I could not walk half a mile without suffering intense agony which would bring on a severe illness. About one year ago I was induced to try a bottle of your VIGORENE and am glad to state that after taking four bottles I was entirely cured of both diseases and am now enjoying excellent health and strength. I advise all similarly afflicted to try VIGORENE.

ALMOST A CRIME.

AN OLD MAN'S STORY OF BOYISH PASSION.

You ask me to tell you about it children, and I will; I only warn you to let it be a lesson to you in future years not to give way to passion or malice.

You would hardly imagine such a tough old graybeard as your Uncle Ned is now was ever a slender, stripling youth, whose mind was filled with romance, and whose soft, womanish heart seemed to be beating only for love, but such I was at two-and-twenty.

Many is the maiden I had kissed under the mistletoe and beaued home from singing school, but, up to the summer I mention, I never met one that stirred more than a passing fancy. That summer my father told me he was going to send me on a journey to New Hampshire, to finish some business he had begun by letter with his old fried Owen Dalton.

I was glad to undertake the mission, for in those days when railroads were as scarce as hen's teeth, young men got very little chance to go away from home, so one Monday morning I clambered on top of the old stage coach and started off, feeling almost for the first time a sense of my independence and freedom.

As the stage lumbered past the old farm house I saw my darling mother and my only sister waving their handkerchiefs and kissing their hands to me, and the tears started unbidden down my boyish cheeks, and my throat swelled with an emotion I tried in vain to suppress.

My journey was uneventful until we arrived at Concord, and stopped at the old Eagle Hotel to bait the horses and allow the passengers to dine. Here I picked up my first acquaintance, as travelers so frequently do, and was surprised to find that he was going on the coach with me.

He was a young man of perhaps twenty-five, light hair, blue eyes, a bright, ingenious expression to as frank a mouth as I ever saw. I was immediately attracted to him. He clambered up on top of the coach as I did, and drawing from his pocket a leather cigar case, offered me one.

I had never smoked a cigar, but felt a kind of shame to refuse, so I took one and lighted it with as much, or perhaps much more importance than an old smoker. We glided into conversation.

'Where did you say you were going?' I asked.

'To Daltonville!'

'To Daltonville?'

'Yes. Is there anything strange in that?'

'No; but I was suprised. I am going there, too.'

'Well, I know most of the families about there,' he returned, puffing his cigar. 'Whom do you visit?'

'The Daltons!'

'The Daltons?'

'Yes. Is there anything strange in that?' I asked, as I laughingly repeated his very words, in the meantime watching the smoke as it curled from my cigar.

No, nothing strange, except that we should meet. I am distantly related to the family, and am going there to spend a couple of months. Do you know Anna?'

'Anna?' I asked. Is there a young lady there?'

'Yes, my boy, a young and handsome lady—one you can't help liking.

'Oh, very well then. I'll—— Driver what are you wobbling over the road for?'

'Shure, sur, an' I think the only wobble as you call it, is in that segar yer a smoking.

Sure enough, I felt my head whirling, and I should have fallen off the vehicle had it not been for the assistance of my new found friend, who took my arm.

'I feel sick—so—sick,' I murmured.

'I guess you are not used to strong cigars! Driver stop until I get the young man inside of the stage.'

I scarcely remembered what happened afterward except that I was an awful sick man; but gradually I began to feel better, and by the time we had stopped for the night I had almost recovered.

Albert Warville and myself had become the best of friends. He had cared for me during my illness and not one word did he say of my weakness.

That night the driver approached me and sotto voce, 'Begorra sur, if the first part of that cigar was as voile as the last, I don't blame ye fur gettin' sick,' but I had no stock in what he said, for I should not have known whether it was good or bad.

Well, we arrived after a few days' travel at Daltonville. This little village nestled in a valley near one of the most precipitous mountains of the Franconia range. It was a place of romance, and I built future hopes of the beauties of the surrounding scenery, for I was fond of hunting, and fishing, and had had quite a good deal of experience.

We were cordially welcomed at the Dalton House, where I found my friend was hailed as Cousin Albert. I did not see Anna Dalton until the supper hour, although I don't doubt Albert did, as he made himself at home, leaving me with the two boys of the house, Henry and Willie.

During the afternoon I gained their youthful hearts by promising to make them each an Indian bow. When I saw Anna Dalton I was not surprised that Albert called her handsome; I should have called her beautiful, for

"A fairer fair vision ne'er greeted my sight."

It was but the work of a few hours for me to fall desperately, madly, boyishly in love with her.

Two weeks glided by. I had begun to pay direct attentions to the beautiful Anna, although I could not tell whether she was playing with me, or was in earnest. She received my addresses as a queen might the homage of her subjects; then just as I was on the point of telling her my feelings she would begin to trill some melody and dance out of the room.

I was getting frantic. I felt that I must "gush" or the pent-up waters of my soul would burst through all restraints. But, no! Anna's manners precluded the possibility of any "gush" on my part. In despair, some days, I'd don my hunting suit and shoulder my gun and spend an afternoon in the woods sometimes with Albert, oftener without him, for, truth to tell, I was becoming madly jealous of him and of his quiet, authoritative ways. One day I had hunted the house over for Anna, resolved to tell her how much I loved her, and to find out the truth concerning her regard for me.

I was destined to find it out in a much more abrupt and disagreeable manner. I then asked after the boys. Their mother told me they had taken the bows I had made for them and gone up to the mountain to shoot some small game.

About a quarter of a mile from the house was a very beautiful waterfall, called Sylvan Glade Cataract, and by this limpid stream was the nearest path up the mount.

It was approached by a narrow path, and was surrounded by a thick mass of undergrowth, and trees, so that you would not imagine its proximity until quite upon it. I strode up the path, vexed that I did not see Anna while the mood was on me to tell her all.

I approached the cataract and heard voices, but kept steadily on parting the bushes only to see "my Anna," as I had come to term her, in the arms of Albert Warville, while he pressed kiss after kiss upon her lips, which maddened while it calmed me.

I stepped into the enclosure and Albert released the girl as I tapped him roughly on the arm.

'Come with me, Albert Warville!' I said.

My tone was so authoritative that he had followed me without a word until we had put a dozen paces between ourselves and Anna.

'Now, Albert Warville, what right have you to the caresses of that girl?' I hissed, my heart beating fiercely while my face must have been drawn and hard.

'The right of my affianced wife, Ned Baker, and I thought you too much of a gentleman to seek to interrupt such a relationship.'

I reeled and staggered as though I had been struck a blow, while he quietly went back to Anna, and together they started down the mountain. Then I seemed to awake to my condition and beat my breast and tore my hair in a maniacal fashion, which I look back on now with amusement, although at that time it was sternest reality.

I watched them clear down the mountain side and saw Anna cross the plateau alone. Was he coming back to me? Oh no, I could not meet him; my brain seemed on fire and was filled with wicked murderous thoughts.

Desperately I plunged on through the wood, not knowing or caring whither my steps led me.

At last I paused, for there, standing right ahead of me, was the form of Albert Warville. He was standing near the edge of "the cliff," as it was called a rocky projection with a sheer descent of some forty-five feet, and appeared to be meditating and looking off, while I noticed Anna's light blue scarf around his neck.

Instinctively I raised my gun to fire at him, when, on second thought, I lowered it; I remembered that Anna's brothers were in the woods somewhere, but my brain was maddened and whirling, and for the time being I was carried away with passion at what I termed his villainy. I was crazed and frenzied to see Anna's blue scarf encircling his neck. I bent to the ground and seized a large stone; casting it with a precision long practice had taught me, I heard it strike him with a dull thud. I saw him topple and fall, and waited to hear his death scream, but there was no sound. All was as still as death. As still as death? My God! that was an awful thought; that was the thought which made me sane again. I fell to the ground, utterly incapable of motion.

The few moments I lay there seemed like dreadful hours to me; then, as consciousness came back, it appeared to be a hideous dream, and I dragged myself to the edge of the cliff and looked over. There he lay, all curled up in a heap. Oh, merciful Heaven! was I to go through life with the stain of a murderer on my hand!

But I must arouse myself—I must act—and the first thing was to dispose of the body; so I started on a roundabout path the only way to reach the bottom of the cliff. As I neared the spot, I was sure I heard voices, and, gazing through the trees, I saw little Henry and Willie Dalton standing by the body.

I turned in terror to fly, wild with my agonizing thoughts, but I was seen, and the two boys started me, crying lustily:

'Cousin Ned! Cousin Ned!'

I turned and met them.

'Was it you, Cousin Ned, that knocked him off?' asked Willie.

I gave up all for lost, and, falling on my face, I cried out:

'May God forgive me, it was I!'

The two boys sprang to my side and lifted me up.

Said Willie:

'What's the matter, Cousin Ned? There's no great harm done.'

While Henry cried out:

'We were going to shoot at him, but we can set him up just as well down here.'

I started to my feet. I sprang to the object. It was a dummy target filled with straw. The boys had used some old clothes of Albert's, his hat, and their sister's scarf.

I laughed wildly, then hysterically, and at last somewhat naturally, as I said, with an effort:

'How's that for theatricals, boys? I fooled you, didn't I?'

'Yes, you did, Cousin Ned,' returned Willie. 'You acted as though you were frightened nearly to death.'

Now, children, you have the story. That cured my first case of love and my terrible passions forever. I stood up at the marriage of Albert Warville and Cousin Anna, as I got to calling her, and no one has ever heard before the story of how I committed 'Almost a Crime.'—Chicago Saturday Herald.

The young man was evidently honest in his intentions, but three years of constant courting had failed to overcome his excessive bashfulness. They were setting in chairs at a respectful distance apart. Said the young man, having spent five minutes in search of a subject:

"How do you get along with your cooking?"

"Nicely," replied the young miss; "I'm improving wonderfully. I can make a splendid cake now."

"Can you?" said the young man in a pleasant manner; "what kind do you like best?"

I like the one made with flour and sugar and citron and raisins and currents, and lots of those things, and beautiful frosting on top," responded the young miss.

"Why that's a wedding cake," exclaimed the young man nervously.

"I meant wedding." said the young miss shyly.

They are published.

Boy and Girl.

Our readers who are of an observing sort may take their places any morning where they can see a stream of people pursuing their way to business—clerks, shop girls, teachers, editors, lawyers, merchants, marketers—and they will soon take notice of a peculiar fact, which is that every nine men out of ten go with a careless air, indifferent if not absorbed, slouching, shuffling, head down or awry, shoulders bent, hands in pocket, and legs moving any way to cover the distance; and that every nine women in ten walk erectly, shoulders back, chest full with measured movement and more or less gliding gait, never forgetting a proper bearing, although often apparently as absorbed and lost in thought as he who precedes or who comes after her.

Now this is a curious circumstance, and in realizing the truth of one's observation one looks about for the reasons why the greater number of our women walk so well, while the men pay so little attention to gait and demeanor, except under particular stress, and then relapsing into ordinary habit when the necessity of the moment is removed. And the more one thinks of it the more one is convinced that the reason lies with the mothers of these men and women.

From the moment that the little girl can go alone, her mother, her nurse, her guardian of the moment, whoever it may be, is perpetually counseling her to hold up her head, to sit straight, to fill her lungs, to throw back her shoulders, to turn out her toes, and in extreme cases braces are put upon the tender shoulders, the feet are obliged to walk a line while a book is balanced on the head, or the little wretch is even laced to a peculiar chair for a certain length of time daily, to enforce the carriage of the body in nearly a straight line from the base of the spine to the top of the head, or, if the spine be bent, to lie on an inclined plane, held there by a cap of leather or steel, if the latter has not, by this, gone out of use. When she walks her gait is marked and cultivated; she is told not to wag her shoulders, not to swing her body, not to look behind her, not to shuffle, not to bend or lift the knee, and made to give a goodly share of attention to the effort of getting over ground in a right line without the visible lifting of the foot and jerking of the frame and tossing of the head. Thus early taught that walking is an art, she practices it till it becomes nature.

On the other hand, the boy receives no such instruction; a general impression, but perhaps not an entirely conscious one, prevails that such a course would make him vain and effeminate, and therefore he is never subjected to it except in military schools. Great care being taken in his infancy that the chubby little legs shall not become bandied, and an occasional word being thrown in in advancing years as to holding up his head, responsibility concerning his carriage ceases and is dismissed, it being taken for granted either that good walking does not matter so much for a man, or that, being a man, he is sure to do everything in the right way. Moreover, a boy seldom walks; he runs and skips and jumps and saunters, and the opportunity of impressing the future importance of his bearing upon him is much more infrequent than it is with girls—girls who are apt to be older for their years than boys, and who early develop the love of praise and the desire to please, and who, in superficial things, imitate their elders more quickly than boys do, having also the hourly sight of the graceful and gentle movements of mothers and aunts and teachers and elder sisters before them for, perhaps, if they saw their mothers sitting with their feet higher than their heads, or with their knees crossed in the cars and the soles of their shoes wiping every one who brushes by, or with their two hands in their pockets in the street, they also would be inclined to do as these mothers do.

Whether in so many words or not, the girl is taught, from her earliest lesson, to make herself attractive; that she learns is one of her chief duties in life. If it has some debasing and belittling effects—if even while it teaches slavish humility in the one light, it gives birth to vanity and coquetry in the other, and destroys some portion of womanly grace and refinement—it nevertheless helps largely in the work of civilizing the race, and rather than repress the custom of instruction and correction in this regard, we would enlarge it and apply it to boys, that they might, when older, from force of habit rather than from constant consciousness, carry themselves as becomes the lords of creation, modifying, however, some of the present manner of giving the instruction, which really produces in the end the debasement and coquetry, and compelling proper demeanor as fit reverence for the powers of the body and its Creator.

The fact that, in the natural life of the savage, this difference in the carriage of men and women fails to be found, only serves to convince us that it is more a matter of art and maxim than of nature, for, under the necessities of savage life, the Indian man and woman will be observed to have the same erect bearing and elastic tread, it being admitted that their defects are common to both; and it seems a pity that while any portion of the race is becoming more civilized, beings should become less perfect animals. When occasion arises, indeed, there is no one who has a more magnificent bearing than our brothers and husbands; but we think that if mothers would consider it best somewhat to impress upon boys the art of pleasing and the fitness of a dignified carriage, it would not be only on occasion that the average man equals the exceptional gentleman and walks laudari a laudato viro.—Harper's Bazar.

Long Words.

"Rob, which is the most dangerous word in the English language to pronounce?' said Tom.

"Don't know unless it is a swearing word," replied Rob.

"Pooh it is stumbled; because you are sure to get a tumble between the first and last letter," said Tom.

"Ha! now I have one for you. I found it one day in reading the paper. Which is the longest word in the English language?" replied Rob.

'Valetudinarianism,' answered Tom, promptly.

"No, sir, it is smiles; because there is a whole mile betwen the first and last letter."

"Ho that's nothing; I know a word that has over three miles between its beginning and ending," cried Tom.

"And what's that?" said Rob, faintly.

"Beleaguered," exclaimed Tom, triumphantly.

Napoleon's Old Soldier Dead.

MAJOR AUGUST RULLMAN, WHO FOLLOWED HIM FROM ULM TO WATERLOO.

Major August Rullman, one of the old soldiers of Napoleon I, whom he followed through all his European campaigns subsequent to 1805, beginning at the Ulm and ending at Waterloo, died in Newark on Sunday, in his 97th year. Major Rullman, who was born at Erfurt in 1781, came to this country in 1834. His son, Frederick Rullman, keeps the theatre ticket office at 111 Broadway. Major Rullman received a military education, and began active service in the Chasseurs-a-Cheval in 1805. The story of his military life is like a romance. Few men have fought in so many battles as he and survived. He was at Austerlitz, Auerstadt, Jena, and Erfurt. He went safe through the awful slaughter at Eylan. He fought at Friedland, Somosierra, Ratisbon, Essling, Aspern, and Wagram. He followed the great emperor, whom he almost idolized, in the terrible invasion of Russia, and was decorated with the cross of the legion of honor for his bravery in capturing a Russian cannon and howitzer in the fight at Witepski. He was in all the hard-fought battles that opened the way to Moscow, and he suffered the agonies of cold, hunger, fatigue, and desperation that beset the French army in its famous retreat. He escaped through the horrors of the passage of the Berecina, and again followed his emperor in the terrible campaigns of 1813 and 1814.

On the return of Napoleon from Elba Major Rullman was one of the first to enroll himself in the army that the Emperor collected with such marvelous rapidity for his last campaign. He shared in the glory of Napoleon's last victories at Charleroi and Quatre-Bras, and fought on the field of Waterloo. That ended his military career. When Napoleon abdicated, Major Rullman retired to civil life in Germany. Nothing, he said, could persuade him to serve under Louis XVIII.

Major Rullman's description of how he escaped through the River Beresina, on the retreat from Moscow, seemed almost incredible. He succeeded, in the rout and confusion, in obtaining a horse, and then, hurried resistlessly on by the pressure of the eager thousands behind, he and his horse were pushed over the ice-wall into the freezing water. The river was choked with drowning men and horses, and jagged pieces of floating ice. It was a battle for life not only with the water, but with hundreds of struggling men who were madly clutching every object that might save them. Major Rullman's strong horse bore him safely through this terrible stream, but the opposite bank was piled from four to six feet high with broken ice, rendered more slippery by the passage of drifting thousands. Over this barrier his horse could not climb. At every attempt he fell back into the ice-cold water. Then Major Rullman bethought him of a small trunk that was strapped to his saddle, and which contained a quantity of rich woman's apparel. He obtained a footing for his horse, and wrapped some of these garment around the horse's feet. This enabled the animal to clamber over the icy barrier, carrying his rider safely to firm land. Of this terrible passage Major Rullman used to say, "There is no pen, pencil, language, or any mode of explanation that can describe it." At Wilna, where he arrived in a pitiable plight, Major Rullman was kindly treated by two Polish Jews, who furnished him with food and clothing, and who afterward, when news was received that Russians were approaching, took him in a sleigh and drove all night, never leaving him until they had placed him in safety across the Niemen. Major Rullman always spoke of these generous strangers with the most affectionate regard.

One Way to Get Married.

Judge Richardson does not pretend to be a parson and therefore isn't as well up in the marriage ceremony as the slimy supporters of a dying hierachy. The young couple stood up before him one evening and the Judge inquired in a cross questioning tone of the groom:

'Are you a citizen of the United States?'

The groom took hold the waistband of his trousers and shrugged, saying:

'I voted for Tilden, Judge.'

'Why James!' faintly exclaimed the blushing creature by his side.

'It's a fact Emmer,' protested James rather indignantly, and glaring at the Judge.

His Honor coughed and demanded severely:

'Do you, sir, as a citizen of Nevada and a lawful voter of Reno, solemnly declare that you will forsake all other evils and cleave to this one?,'

'I've money to bet on it," responded the groom, growing pale, but placing his arm around the waist of the shrinking bride.

'Then,' cried the Judge, bringing his fist down on his desk, 'God has joined you together and —— the man puts you asunder. The fee is just what you like to give young fellow.'

It was pretty liberal and the court set them up and kissed the new wife several times besides.

The Ocean Floor.

Here is an end of all romance about hidden ocean depths. We can speculate no longer about Peris in chambers of pearl, or mermaids, or heaped treasures and dead men's bones whitening in coral caves. The whole ocean floor is now mapped out for us. The report of an expedition sent out from London in Her Majesty's ship Challenge has recently been published. Nearly four years were given to the examation of the currents and floors of the four great oceans of the world. The Atlantic we are told, if drained would be a vast plain, with a mountain ridge in the middle running paralled with our coast. Another range crosses it from Newfoundland to Ireland, on the top of which lies a submarine cable. The ocean is thus divided into three great basins, no longer "unfathomed depths." The tops of these sea mountains are two miles below a sailing ship, and the basins, according to Recius, 15 miles, which is deep enough for drowning, if not for mysetry. The mountains are whitened for thousands of miles by a tiny, creamy shell. The depths are in red in color, heaped with volcanic mosses. Through the black, motionless water of these abysses move gigantic abnormal creatures, which never rise to the upper currents.

A Startling Adventure.

HOW APPEARANCES ARE NEVER CERTAIN.

The most remarkable instance of appearances being altogether opposed to facts is contained in a true incident which [illegible] Prasca Lenpowloff, the heroic Russian [illegible] who traveled on foot from Siberia to St. Petersburg, for the purpose of soliciting the pardon of her exiled parents from the hands of the emperor, upon which noble proof of a daughter's love the tale of "Elizabeth; or, the Exiles of Siberia," is founded.

She chanced to arrive after nightfall in a town the name of which she could never learn exactly, and, knocking at the door of the first house she came to, it was opened by an old man of a most forbidding countenance. He rudely inquired what she wanted, and, when she asked for a night's lodging, shut the door in her face. An instant after he called her back and said she might come in if she pleased. Prasca felt rather sorry than glad that he had changed his mind, and the sight of his wife, an old woman, even more unpleasant-looking than himself, did not make her more comfortable. The room they were sitting in was large and gloomy, lighted only by pieces of pine wood smelling strongly of turpentine. These were stuck into the wall in several places, and gave an uncertain flickering light, that, to the mind of Prasca, had something in it awful and unearthly. Her hosts bade her sit down, and before they offered her so much as a crust of bread, began to cross-question her as to where she was going to, and what money she had for her journey.

"I have eighty brass kopeks," she said, "that were given me at Kamonichieff."

And she felt at that moment how willingly would she have given the whole sum to be out of their hands.

"That cannot be," said the old woman. "Eighty kopeks to go from Siberia to St. Petersburg! You must have gold or notes."

"Indeed, I tell you the truth," said the [illegible] girl; "and, if you please, you may see my purse."

Upon this they gave her a few potatoes, and told her to lie down in her clothes on a sort of platform over the stove, where Russian peasants, who are too poor to have beds, often pass the night. She did so, taking the precaution, however, to leave her bag on the floor, that it might be seen [illegible] fear of being searched. She could not sleep, but lay still, listening to what was going forward. To her extreme terror, she first heard the old woman carefully bolt the door and fasten the bars of the window shutter; then her husband said in a whisper:

"No one saw her come in—we can do what we please."

After a few minutes, during which she concluded they were examining the contents of her bag, he again said:

'This is all nonsense. She [illegible] money. Did you not see an oilskin [illegible] round her neck?'

And presently the old woman climbed [illegible] the side of the stove, and Prasca saw [illegible] dreadful eyes peering at her as she [illegible]. Fearing they would murder her, she begged for mercy, and showed the little purse with the kopeks and passport, entreating them to leave the passport only, and take all the rest. To this the old woman made no answer, but felt in her pockets, pulled off her boots, examined her dress from head to foot, and at last went down again without hurting her. Frasca heard nothing more till, some time after, the deep breathing of her host and hostess assured her they were both asleep, and, overcome by fatigue, she fell asleep, also. When she awoke it was broad daylight, and the old woman was up and cooking; and the first words she heard were to bid her come and have some stchi, a sort of soup made of salt meat and cabbage, on which the Russian [illegible] live almost entirely.

The old man brought a jug of beer made from the grain of rye, out of the cellar, and they both pressed her to sit with them to breakfast. The terrors of the night appeared like a dream till the old man herself alluded to what had happened.

"I wanted to find out," she said, "whether you were an honest girl, or whether you had been telling us lies. We are satisfied about you now."

In spite of the change in their behavior Prasca felt no regret in quitting their house. She got out as quickly as she could, and after some time, she sat down under a [illegible] and had the curiosity to count the money in her bag. What was her surprise when instead of 80 kopeks, she found 120! The strange couple had added 40 more!

Choate's Criminal Clients.

In his arguments for persons who had become complicated in seemingly criminal acts of which they were, at least, not so guilty as they were accused of being, his masterly way of putting himself, by imagination in the place of his clients, and exhibiting all the pathos that could be elicited from their embarrassments and struggles, often drenched his clients themselves in irrepressible tears. They hardly knew before what heroes and martyrs they were. They wept at the eloquent recapitulation of what they suffered and done; they became poetic personages, worthy of the pen of Scott or Dickens; they were so affected they considered Lawyer Choate should charge little for presenting them before the community in their true light, and therefore often forgot or neglected to pay him anything. His dramatic power in exhibiting the interior feelings of the half guilty, the quarter guilty, and the guilty who are perfectly innocent in their own conceit and herefore regard a prosecution as a persecution, was so wonderful that many of the persons who are acquitted through his exertions never paid him what they would have paid an advocate who less identified himself with their interests and characters. Indeed, after his work was done he appeared himself to set a modest estimate on its value. The occasions when he obtained large fees were due to his partner, who made the contracts beforehand; for Mr. Choate generally considered the obstacles in the way of getting a verdict for his clients formidable until the case was settled, and was indifferent to the amount of the fee only after he had succeeded.—Edwin P. Whipple, in Harper's Magazine for November.

A FINAL WORD.

Before another issue of this paper the great questions that have been agitating the State for several months past will have been settled. Next Tuesday will determine the battle, and the result depends entirely upon the constancy and activity of the Democratic party. There are enough of them within the borders of the commonwealth to carry the election by a large majority. Will they permit the victory to slip from their grasp by their indifference? or will any number of them be drawn away from allegiance to the grand old party by new and strange doctrine? There is just one issue in the election in this State. It is not whether gold, or silver, or greenbacks shall be the money of the nation. An overwhelming majority in favor of the Greenback party would not affect that question one iota. The majority in Congress is fixed for the next two years, and the financial policy as to currency cannot be changed within that time. The simple issue is this: Does Pennsylvania belong absolutely to the Camerons, or is she a free and independent State? Shall Don Cameron be returned to the United States Senate, or shall he be retired to the shades of private life, which he ought never to have been permitted to leave? That is the whole fight. In order to aid them in this scheme to continue the Cameron dynasty, the Republicans are encouraging the Greenback movement well knowing that at the last moment all the members of their party will return to the fold, while Democratic followers of the new movement will weaken their old party by not returning. That is the whole story, and Democrats who support that ticket may learn too late the unpleasant fact that they have been blind tools in the hands of Cameron, Hoyt & Co. A vote for Mason is a vote for Hoyt. A vote for Hoyt and the Republican ticket is a vote for Cameron. Democrats will see that by voting for anybody but the straight party nominees, they are voting for Cameron and endangering the success of the party. Finally, we say, think well before acting rashly. To stay at home is giving a vote for Hoyt by losing one for Dill. Turn out every voter in the county, young and old, and help roll up a glorious majority for the good, old Democratic party!

The only genuine Democratic ticket is exactly like the one printed in this paper. Vote no other.

THE STRAIGHT TICKET.

We print in this issue three tickets. They are the straight Democratic ticket, and all those differing from them in any way are bogus. It will be seen by the instructions at the top that there are three tickets in each one—the "Judiciary," "State," and "County." These are to be separated and folded, so that those words will appear on the outside of the ticket. If you do not need three full tickets in your family, cut them off and give them to your neighbor. See that they go where they will do the most good.

The Democracy of the county owe it to themselves to give such a rebuke to bolters and independent candidates in their own ranks that hereafter we shall not be annoyed by such experimenters at our elections.

TO DEMOCRATS OF COLUMBIA COUNTY.

The time is drawing near when the Democrats of Columbia county will be called upon to show their strength and unity. Let me call upon you to rally again to our standard. Let those who have been in doubt hesitate no longer but come out as of old, boldly and nobly, without fear or doubt, now the hour of triumph approaches, and share the glory of the great victory that is at hand. Come and help those who are honestly trying to carry out the principles of reform. Do not waste your votes by casting them with any new party, but stand firm to our old principles and all will be well. Do not be carried away by new fallacies, but be true and firm and our efforts will be crowned with success.

DAVID LOWENBERG,
Chairman.

GENERAL ALBRIGHT.

During the war of the rebelion Albright raised a nine months' regiment with an appointment of colonel from Gov. Curtin. When he brought his regiment to Harrisburg he had himself mustered in as a private in order to receive the bounty of five hundred dollars paid by Banks township, Carbon county. The next day he was mustered out as a private and mustered in as colonel of the regiment, thus receiving five hundred dollars for one day's nominal service in Camp Curtin as a private soldier and defrauding the government of his country of an able-bodied recruit. Albright was in fact a colonel of the regiment, awaiting muster, when he took this bounty of a private. His name was put on the rolls as a private that he might accomplish this fraud, and when he was mustered out next day to be mustered in as a colonel no one took his place in the ranks. Banks township filled its quota by this trick, Albright got his five hundred dollars, and the government was cheated out of a soldier. In the face of this record Albright was elected a member of congress at large in 1872. The mercenary and bounty jumper now hopes to profit by dissensions in the democratic party to again secure a seat in congress.

CORRECTED STATEMENT.

In setting the "Report of Conferees" in the COLUMBIAN, of the 25th inst., an omission of a line in the copy made the end of the second paragraph read entirely different from the original, by saying that the Columbia conferees "joined the Conferees from Carbon and Monroe, and afterwards agreed to admit irregular conferees from Pike." The paragraph should have read as follows:

"Regarding the action of the conferees (disputed and undisputed) who were first upon the ground at Stroudsburg as premature and unfair, we joined the conferees from Carbon and Monroe, and afterwards agreed to admit conferees from old Luzerne, but refused to agree to admit irregular conferees from Pike."

OUR NEXT CONGRESSMAN.

HON. CHARLES B. BROCKWAY,

True to his friends—true to his party, and who never betrayed or deceived either. He was nominated by the unanimous vote of Pike, Montour, Lackawanna and Columbia counties, and by the contesting delegation from Luzerne. It is time Columbia county had Congressional representation. Our business and tariff interests should be guarded. Our labor interests should be protected; and wild financial schemes should receive a quietus by a popular verdict. Remember that Klotz had the vote of only two uncontested counties out of seven, viz: Carbon and Monroe. By no possibility can he or Orvis be elected, and the diversion of Democratic votes, may lead to the election of Albright, the Republican nominee. Our people cannot afford this, and therefore waiving technical questions, should stand by the choice of the democracy of the district. It is time personal feuds and enmities were buried. The young democracy—the soldier and labor element should vote solidly for the nomination made by 15 out of 21 conferees—by five out of seven candidates—and supported by every Democratic paper in the district, except possibly one.

Captain Brockway could not honestly support Klotz for reasons given in annexed affidavits. He was at all times ready and willing to go for Senator Buckalew, Col. Freeze or any other good man, if Klotz would also yield. The hour for compromise has gone past, and we must now stand by Columbia's choice.

COLUMBIA COUNTY, S S:

Personally appeared before me a Notary Public in and for said county C. B. Brockway who being duly sworn according to law deposes and says: First, That he has not seen Recorder M. S. Quay at any time in regard to his nomination or election for Congress Second, That he has never seen Don Cameron on the same subject. Third, That at the Scranton convention he did not see, correspond, or have communication directly or indirectly with Frank Beamish. Fourth, That General Hoyt and himself never had a line of correspondence or a word of conversation in reference to the Governorship or Congressman, nor any mutual friend between them. Fifth, At the Stroudsburg convention the Columbia delegation unanimously voted against an adjournment on the ground that it would lead to strife and dissension in the party. Sixth, That at the Hazleton convention, October 16th, the Columbia delegation unanimously resolved to leave in a body because Robert Klotz would not agree to a compromise candidate nor to Columbia county's choice. Failing to make the train that day, they unanimously agreed to leave in a body at noon the following day, and in accordance with that resolution Sheriff Hoffman and himself caught the train and David Lowenberg and Dr. T. J. Swisher accidentally missed the train. Seventh, It was also unanimously agreed that neither himself nor any of his conferees would accept a single dollar from Major Klotz or any of his friends to nominate said Klotz for Congress. Eighth, That $1500 00 were offered to him or one of his conferees for one conferee's vote from Columbia county to make the ten necessary to make the nomination as required by the rule, which was then promptly declined by him and each of his conferees; that he did not have nor show any amount of money at Scranton but had to borrow to pay personal expenses.

COLUMBIA COUNTY, S. S:

Personally appeared before me a Notary Public in and for said County, John W. Hoffman late a Conferee for C. B. Brockway candidate for Congress in the eleventh Congressional District, who being duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he and his colleagues refused an offer of $1500. to nominate Maj. Robt. Klotz for Congress; that C. B. Brockway and his conferees unanimously agreed on Oct. 16th to withdraw from the conference because of an offered bribe and because of the hopelessness of reaching an harmonious conclusion; that Capt. Brockway carried no money to Scranton, nor did he meet Frank Beamish there; that no person was substituted by me, nor authorized to vote in my absence; that the adjournment at Stroudsburg was against the vote of the Columbia County Conferees; that the same conferees agreed unanimously to leave the Hazleton Conference on Thursday noon the 17th; and no telegram or its contents were shown or made known to me between Messrs. Buckalew and Lowenberg.

The democratic mass meeting in Philadelphia on Saturday night last was the most magnificent affair known to the history of the politics of that city. There were over 25,000 people in attendance to greet General George B. M'Clellan and Senator Dill. The enthusiasm was so great that it was with difficulty that the distinguished visitors could find opportunity to return thanks for the grand reception given them. The rule of Cameron ring republicanism in Philadelphia is ended.

TO THE DEMOCRATIC VOTERS OF COLUMBIA COUNTY.

I take this mode of saying to you that at the Congressional Convention held at Hazleton I was nominated as your candidate for Congress for the eleventh district.

I hope to secure the approval of your county. If elected I promise to be the faithful representative of the people and to protect their interests to the best of my ability.

ROBERT KLOTZ.

The Chief Justice Delivers a Strong Opinion Against the Ringmasters.

THE DUPLICITY AND TREACHERY OF CHAIRMAN QUAY AND THE RING CHIEFS FULLY EXPOSED.

Chief Justice Agnew has published an address to the people of Pennsylvania on the subject of his candidacy for re election which we reproduce in full below. It is a terrible revelation of the duplicity and treachery of the leaders of the Republican party in this State toward that eminent jurist and life-long Republican. Its publication has revolutionized the politics of the western counties, and will settle the hash of "Cameron, Hoyt & Co."

CHIEF JUSTICE AGNEW'S ADDRESS.

"To the People of Pennsylvania:

"The time has come when I can no longer silently suffer my position before the public to be misconstrued. I cannot delay the explanation until after the election, lest it then be characterized as an excuse. The remarkable silence of the entire Republican press in the State, which has not even informed its patrons of what the Greenback press has willingly admitted to be my attitude, authorizes me to ask now, as a right, what its voluntary justice has not heretofore accorded. The duty is the more imperious when I have indubitable authority that Chairman Quay has stated that he gave instruction for this studied silence. I therefore say I have not sought or accepted a nomination to the supreme bench from any party or class; and when the truth is presently told, it will be seen that even before the Republican convention my candidacy was nominal only.

"In July, 1877, Mr. Quay, my townsman and neighbor, and the present Chairman of the Republican State Committee, asked my intention as to the Judgeship in 1878. I stated my wife's aversion, because of my prolonged absences, and my indifference. He said this should not be known, as it would beget complications if it were understood I would be out of the field; and suggested to me to announce no conclusion until the Harrisburg Court, in May or June. Believing this to be reasonable, I acquiesced. About ten days after Judge Sterrett's defeat in November, Lewis Z. Mitchell, Esq., a leading member of the Butler bar, came to my room in the Monongahela House, holding in his hand an Evening Leader containing an editorial headed 'Judge Sterrett's Future,' and asked me if I sanctioned it. In substance it proposed Judge Sterrett for my place, and read me out by reason of age. I believe that it was intended to forestall public opinion, even before the tears of defeat were dried upon the cheeks. Mr. Mitchell, a Democrat, stated it to be the intention of the Butler bar to support me.

"During the same term I had numerous calls from eminent gentlemen of the bar of the surrounding counties, asking me to be a candidate.

"I had been a warm friend of Judge Sterrett's election, undoubted by him, when he doubted another, and felt it due to both to form him of my probable course if I found him anxious to renew the contest after a severe defeat. Next morning I sought him, told him of the Leader article, and said the newspapers were likely to bring us into conflict. He denied personal knowledge, but went no further. I tried to continue the subject, but met a reticence so forbidding I desisted. I still cherished the purpose of befriending Judge Sterrett, declaring to Judge Hice, Colonel John M. Sullivan, and to members of my family, my intention to resign before my term expired if I found it necessary to secure his nomination by an appointment. Another opportunity occurred to Judge Sterrett when we met in consultation in Philadelphia on the 4th of January, 1878. I mentioned to Judge Mercur my effort at Pittsburg, hoping he might communicate it to Judge Sterrett. The latter called at my room in the Continental to say good-bye and I tried to revive the subject, but without effect. He has never since broken his silence, but has pursued his purpose until he reached a nomination by means I shall state. I did not claim title to the succession, though opposed by no other candidate, my presence in the field excluding a contest, as was the judgment of Mr. Quay in July, but I did expect of Judge Sterrett an open and friendly understanding, especially as my mind was filled with generous resolves toward him.

"These facts have the benefit of legal evidence in communications to others before conflict—as lawyers say, ante litem motam. Their number and respectability preclude doubt or denial. In November, after my return home, a member of the Beaver bar pressed me to permit him to announce me as a candidate. This was inconsistent with the course prescribed in July and embarrassed me, and I put him off; yet being friendly and persistent, I concluded an editorial would not commit me fully, but not wishing it to embarrass me too much by beginning at home, I wrote to a friend in Harrisburg, in order that it might be suggested there first The subsequent extensive notoriety given to it at Lancaster I am not responsible for and regretted, and especially some letters written thence without my knowledge.

"Soon after my arrival in Philadelphia I found adverse combinations forming of the interests of Philadelphia, Luzerne, Allegheny, and other counties, for the purpose of controlling the Republican Convention to the benefit of a United States Senator, a Governor, and a Supreme Judge. Mr. Quay had his heart set upon the Recordership of Philadelphia. There were questions as to the constitutional protection of the office, eligibility, residence, etc. The office liable to repeal when obtained, his interests coincided with the Senator's in securing the Legislature, or, failing in that, the election of the Governor and requiring a two-thirds vote. To be just to him I must say that I did not doubt his personal friendship (of years' standing), but his own interest was stronger than mine. I could bring no political influence; Allegheny could bring eighteen votes. At an early day I had requested him to inform me of anything adverse. Seizing upon this, on the 19th of February he informed me that the canvass for the gubernatorial and senatorial nominations was assuming a shape which, in connection with Sterrett's candidacy, would render my nomination extremely doubtful. I was aware of this from other sources, and had been informed of his declaration that I did not desire to be in the field; a breach, as I considered, of our understanding in July.

"In my reply of February 21, after thanking him for the information, I said—which, interpreted, means I am to be slated aside for the benefit of Cameron, Hoyt & Co., to obtain Sterrett's friends in Allegheny, Philadelphia, and the Juniata region. I shall not at his time enumerate or characterize the movements of the combination, of which I was informed; but may say they included a plan to displace me in the oil regions (as to which see editorial 'Supreme Judgeship' in the Press of March 22, timed to suit a lawsuit of oil men before my friend Judge McJunkin, in Butler, and bearing immediate fruit)

"Another matter came to my previous knowledge (as the chairman knows)—the plan to capture the Allegheny delegates and prevent opposition by a display of apparent courtesy to Judge Sterrett. He lent himself to it, and appointed, among others, a renowned Pittsburg ally, whose manipulation of the convention became conspicuous. To veil the secret, the newspapers gave out that the delegates were divided, seven, six and five, on the candidates for Governor—the vote was solid for Hoyt. These furtive and unfriendly machinations produced some irritation, leading me to say among others, to the chairman, that I would not be pushed aside by such means. But, after my arrival at home in April, I concluded not to be affected by them and to announce my intention, as before stated in May or June. I was again anticipated and defeated by the extraordinary call of the convention for the 15th of May, dictated by the fear of a crumbling combination.

"Another circumstance intervened. I had scarcely reached Harrisburg when I was followed by a Beaver delegate. He called at Mrs. Espy's on Sunday, the 5th day of May, in company with Mr. Quay, and to my surprise asked me whether I intended to be a candidate before the convention. He was the same gentleman who had announced me; who, as a delegate, was instructed to support me; whom I had frequently seen at home, and to whom I had not intimated my intentions. The animus of the visit I instantly interpreted from his company, his haste to follow me, and the evident source of the inquiry. I was irritated, and in language neither misunderstood said I would stand if I did not get two votes in the convention—repeating it—'If I did not get ten votes.' And, in truth, I did not expect any, except in two or three counties beside my own, where personal friends had interested themselves.

"Such is the history of a candidacy in form, but without substance. I made no canvass, sought no support, formed no leagues, had no organ, commissioned no leader, and paid no rewards. Yet, to my surprise, I found a strength of support, a warmth of feeling, and a harmony of result in disjointed action totally unanticipated, and more dear to my heart than a nomination, proving that the true Republican party was with me. Indeed, so strong was the feeling found to be, that it was proposed at noon on the 14th of May, at the house of the Senator, to change the programme, and at night it was feared the 'slate' was broken. Mine was not a set up case. This cannot be affirmed of my opponent's, who, having king and castle, set up his own pawns upon the board.

"As to my nomination by the National committee, the matter is well understood by that party and has been published in its newspapers. I was not a candidate before the convention or the committee. I refused to commit myself to accept, declined positively to a member of the committee, and also to answer letters interrogating me, and refused to be interviewed. I have not been notified of my nomination, nor asked to accept. On the contrary, leading Nationals have told me there is no intention to call for acceptance. They say my nomination was non partisan, made upon my record as a Judge, with a full knowledge that I am a Republican. On this footing alone they support me. I am, therefore, in no degree responsible for my position, either as a rejected candidate of the Republican party, or as the announced nominee of the National committee, and I have never offered myself as an independent candidate. While the office itself is above money theories and partisan contests, I am in the field (nolens volens) by the acts of others, including the Prohibition convention, and by no act of my own, directly or indirectly. On what ground, therefore, am I set up as in opposition to the Republican party? When it is said it is my duty to repudiate the National party, what disclaimer can I make? I have not accepted or recognized their nomination, and they have not tendered it to me. They support me of their own accord on my character and services as a judge. Shall I offensively call them names, and tell free citizens they are unfit to vote for me of their own free will? I know no rule of conduct, moral, political, manly or genteel, which commands me to treat them with discourtesy or with opprobrium when they, without partisanship, generously approve of my judicial life and services and desire to trust me again. On the contrary, a man of right feelings must regard the vote in their convention and committee (the latter unanimous) as a tribute of high value, entitled to my thanks instead of my reproaches.

And what rule shall be applied to the prohibitionists? Shall I insult them also? Shall I tell them they are too insignificant to notice? Who are they that proclaim my duty to the republican party? The people? No—they were for me Am I to be reproached by those who disappointed the people by using a defeated candidate to control the votes of the second county in the state. To them, to him, I owe no duty. I hold myself wholly absolved from the defeat of any one unless it can be shown that I owe a duty to submit to a selfish cabal and bow to a reticent rival.

In regard to my political standing no man can mistake. Forty years' consistency has marked it well, and when whigs, in 1854, entered a secret conclave to proscribe foreigners and Catholics I publicly repelled the wrong to manhood and religion. But as a judge I have never consciously suffered partisan feeling to influence my decision, not hesitating to pronounce the highest executive officer in the state in contumacy when he wrongfully set himself up against law, the administration of justice and the highest welfare of the state. I began my study of law and government under the late Judge Baldwin—in his day one of the great defenders of American labor and popular rights. The impressions of youth ripened into the convictions of manhood and I have ever mantained the duty of a nation to guard its labor against all invasions at home and abroad, just as it protects its soil. Yet it is not the insensate earth which commands the patriot's heart but the interests of those who live and labor upon it, and by their production make their own comforts and wealth.

The rights of the people, as secured by the Declaration of Rights, it has been my endeavor judicially to enforce, regardless of combined influence, wealth, power and opposition. Let the record speak.

In the field by the acts of others, I have asked nothing, assumed nothing, expected nothing. Yet, if the people choose to vote for me, their's is the right, not mine the responsibility. If not, I am content. The attempt of June last made upon me, in charity I have not noticed, and shall not unless pursued by detraction. The actors understand me.

DANIEL AGNEW.

Hoyt a Know-Nothing.

Notwithstanding the utter absurdity of the charge in the face of developed facts as to the insufficiency of his age, the more rabid of the Republican press still persist in accusing Mr. Dill of having been a violent Know-Nothing. For this reason, and this alone, we ask attention to the fact that Henry M. Hoyt was the candidate of the Know-Nothing party in this county for District Attorney in 1855, and was defeated by General Winchester, the Democratic candidate.

The Record of the Times, now the Republican, and then Whig and Know-Nothing organ of the county, in its issue of Sept. 19, 1855, contained the following:

The American County Convention assembled at Pittston last Wednesday, (Sept. 12th) and put in nomination the following named persons for the offices to be filled at the ensuing election: * * District Attorney, Henry M. Hoyt. * *

And in another column of the same issue, the following:

The Whig Convention met yesterday (Sept 18) at the house of F. Helme, Kingston, and nominated the following ticket: * * District Attorney, Henry M. Hoyt. * *

It will be observed that Hoyt's nomination came first from the Americans or Know-Nothings. In further evidence of his connection with that organization, the Record of Oct. 17, if that year, in commenting upon the result of the election, said:

He (Ketcham) alone of all the candidates, stood a poor Whig, unconnected with the other parties.

The Know-Nothing party was in those days in the hands of very bigoted men in this county, in confirmation of which statement we have only to refer to further extracts below from the same Record editorial:

Our ideas of an American party favor opposition to the tremendous influence of a united foreign party in the country to control elections. The Popish-Irish under Bishop Hughes and the lager beer Germans who worship their drink as the former do the Pope, are full of Democracy and easily led by Locofoco leaders. These never show favor to the Whigs, but always go with the strong party for the sake of lager and office. * * Why not make a platform broad enough for them (the Protestant Irish and Republican English, Scotch, Welsh and Germans) to stand on with us all? We know some of them who go heart and soul with Americans for the sake of their children, even farther than we go, because they hate and fear the influence of Popery on future generations, if premitted to rule by holding the balance of power now. Clay and Frelinghuysen were defeated by Catholic votes, because the latter was President of the Bible Society. Every Papist and Jesuit in the land worked against him on that ground. Is it wonderful that the Protestants of all other countries should learn to the other side and form an American party to oppose the Roman?

A pretty thing to make us a province of Rome when Rome is controled by French bayonets. We believe a platform can be built to hold us all. Try it.

We have all along known, of course, of Mr. Hoyt's early training in the dark-lantern cabals of 1854-55 but have hitherto been restrained from alluding thereto by our own belief and Mr. Dill's explicitly expressed wish, that the campaign on his behalf should be conducted strictly upon living issues and without resort to personalities. We should not refer to it now, but for the blind and bigoted persistency of the opposition press in the repetition of the similar allegation against Mr. Dill, which is utterly without foundation, and which has been so clearly and emphatically disproven.—From the Wilkes Barre Leader, October 17.

THE NATIONAL SCOURGE.

It is estimated that the annual damages caused by the ravages of insects and worms exceed $150,000,000 in the United States alone. Truly an enormous loss! Yet it sinks into insignificance when compared with the ravages of that more terrible scourge, Consumption, which annually sweeps hundreds of thousands of human souls into eternity. The causes of consumption are various, depending in every instance for the development of the disease upon the scrofulous disthesis, or temperament, of the victim. Thus the same cause which will produce in one person an attack of acute disease or a slight nervous prostration, will engender consumption in a person of scrofulous habit. That consumption can be cured by proper treatment will be readily perceived when the accumulation and disease is understood, viz: the accumulation and deposition of scrofulous matter (tubercles) in the lungs. Obviously, the principal remedies required are (1) a powerful alterative, or blood-purifier, to arrest the accumulations and also cleanse the blood of the scrofulous matter, and (2) a mild cathartic to expel the diseased matter from the system. This course of treatment, in conjunction with a strict hygienic regime, has proved the most successful method of curing this disease. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Purgative Pellets are the best alterative and cathartic remedies before the public, and have been alone used in thousands of cases of consumption with the most marked efficacy. Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, at Buffalo, N. Y., affords special and unequaled advantages to consumptives, not only possessing the best medical and hygienic means of treatment, but having the essential advantage of being situated in a climate where the inhabitants are notably free from this disease.

"You Don't Know their Value."

"They cured me of Ague, Bilousness, and Kidney Complaint, as recommended. I had a half bottle left which I used for my two little girls who the doctors and neighbors said could not be cured. I am confident I should have lost both of them one night if I had not had the Hop Bitters in my house to use. I found they done them so much good I continued with them, and they are now well That is why I say you do not know half of the value of Hop Bitters, and do not reccomend them high enough."—B., Rochester, N. ### Democratic Platform.

The democracy of Pennsylvania unanimously declare:

That the republican party, its measures and its men, are responsible for the financial distress, the misery and the want that now exist:

It has had control of the legislation of the country, and has enacted and perpetuated a policy that has enriched the few and impoverished the many:

Its system of finance has been one of favor to moneyed monopoly, of unequal taxation, of exemption of classes, of high rates of interest, and of remorseless contraction, which has destroyed every enterprise that gave employment to labor.

Its present hold upon federal power was secured by fraud, perjury and forgery. Its laws are unjust and its practices immoral; they distress the people and destroy their substance.

The only remedy for these evils is an entire change of policy and the dethronement of those in power.

And we resolve that further contraction of the volume of United States legal tender notes is unwise and unnecessary. They should be received for customs duties and reissued as fast as received.

Gold silver and United States legal tender notes at par therewith, are just basis for paper circulation.

A close connection of the federal government with the business interests of the people, through national banks, tends to monopoly and centralization, but, in changing the system, uniformity of notes, security to the note holder and protection of the capital invested, should be provided for.

Treasury notes, issued in exchange for bonds, bearing a low rate of interest, is the best form in which the credit of the government can be given to a paper currency.

Labor and capital have equal demands upon and responsibilities to law. Enterprise and manufactures should be encouraged, so that steady work and fair wages may be yielded to labor, whilst safety of investment and moderate returns for its use belong to capital. Violence or breach of order in support of the real or supposed rights of either should be promptly suppressed by the strong arm of the law.

The Republican party, by its legislation in 1872 which reduced the tariff on bituminous coal from $1.25 to 75 cents per ton, and upon iron, steel, wool, metals, paper glass, leather, and all manufactures of each of them ten per cent., struck a fatal blow at the industries and labor of Pennsylvania.

The public lands are the common property of the people, and they should not be sold to speculators nor granted to railroad or other corporations but should be reserved for homesteads for actual settlers.

Our public debt should be held at home, and the bonds representing it should be of small denominations, in which the savings of the masses may be safely invested.

Thorough investigation into the electoral frauds of 1876 should be made, fraud should be exposed, truth vindicated and criminals punished; but we oppose any attack upon the Presidential title as dangerous to our institutions and fruitless in its results.

The republican party, controlling the legislation of the state, has refused to execute many of the reforms of the new constitution; and among other things, it has neglected and refused.

To compel the acceptance of all its provisions by the corporations of the state;

To prevent undue and unreasonable discrimination in charges for transportation of freight and passengers, and without abatement or drawback to any;

To give to all equal means for transporting raw material of the state in such manner and to such points as they may prefer; and

To publish in good faith monthly statements of where the money of the people was kept.

The republican party creates new offices and enormous perquisites to others, and fills them with favorites, whose chief duty is to manage its political machinery.

Its administration of the state government grows more expensive with each year of its rule.

Legislation has been directed by republican lobbyists, who in turn manipulate and control the nominations of the republican party and its candidates are the creation of a junta whose decrees are accepted as the irreversible mandates of absolute hereditary power.

We denounce these methods, these measures, and these men, as unworthy the support of an honest and free people, and we invite all of every shade of political opinion, to unite with us in delivering the commonwealth from their baleful rule.

After next Tuesday, Andrew H. Dill will be Governor-elect of Pennsylvania.

Rev. Mr. Fessenden of Catawissa officiated at the Episcopal church on Sunday last.

Look out for bogus tickets. There are several in circulation.

If you would do your duty to yourself and your country, turn out on Tuesday and vote the straight Democratic ticket.

T. J. Vanderslice and N. U. Funk, Esqs., will address a Democratic meeting at Iola this (Friday) evening.

Our readers will pardon the lack of news and other interesting reading this week. After the election the press of political matters will end.

There will be a Democratic meeting at John Mann's hotel in Stonytown on Monday evening, November 4th.

The best is the cheapest. Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup is acknowledged to be the safest and most reliable medicine for Babies. Price 25 cents.

There will be a Temperance meeting in the Methodist church on Tuesday evening next—election night. All parties and no partyites invited.

A Democratic meeting at Mifflin on Tuesday night was addressed by C. G. Barkley and John M Clark Esq. The speeches were good, and the attendance large.

We are always pleased to recommend a good article. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup never fails to cure a Cough or Cold in short time. The price is 25 cents.

If all the wagon scales that the Fairbanks Scale Company have built were placed in one continuous line, the result would be a plank road from Boston to Philadelphia. This fact carries considerable weight with it.

Sudden changes of weather are sources of pulmonary and bronchial affections, hence we advise all to take Dr. Haas' Expectorant, even if the cold or cough be ever so slight, as the Expectorant will stop the irritation at once.

James Kealy, late Sergeant of Company "A" 7th Pa Cavalry, and now Superintendent at North Ashland Colliery, and Col. A. D. Seeley, late of the 84th P. Lack of space prevents us from giving the additional list of the men who wore the blue, who unite in the petition published last week.

The Democrats turned out in full force at a meeting at the Asbury school house on the night of the 29th. Mr. Samuel Smith presided John J. Stiles and Aaron Bender were elected Secretarys. Speeches were made by B. F. Zarr and John M. Clark, Esqs., and were listened to with marked attention. The democrats of Fishingcreek will do their duty on Tuesday next.

Whatever Theodore Tilton may be as a man, he ranks high among American lecturers. His discourse last week Thursday night at the Opera House was heard by a small but appreciative audience. The subject was "Heartsease" and the lecture was an able, entertaining and instructive discussion of practical questions of the day.

Reflect that in every cemetery one-half of the silent tenants are the victims of neglected Coughs and colds; and if you are thus afflicted, avoid their fate by resorting at once to Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, an immediate, agreeable, and certain means of cure. On Tuesday night last a democratic meeting was held at Millinville and addressed by Chas. G. Barkley and John M. Clark. Stephen H. Wolf was elected President and Eleazor Schweppenheiser, and A. W. Hess, Secretarys. Owing to the opposition of some parties the democrats were unable to obtain the use of the school house and the meeting was held in the hotel of A. W. Hess, who kindly tendered a room for the purpose.

The D. L. & W. station at this place was entered by burglars on Monday night. Entrance was effected by prying off the shutters. A number of tickets, an overcoat, and other articles in the office were taken, and the thieves then went to the freight room and captured seventeen pairs of boots and a case of tobacco. No clue has yet been obtained, but it is supposed the deed was committed by four tramps who were about town on Monday. The papers are full of accounts of the depredations of such men, and too much care cannot be exercised in securing premises against them.

The only genuine Democratic ticket is exactly like the one printed in this paper. Vote no other.

By reference to the terms of subscription printed on the first page it will be seen that the price of this paper is two dollars a year. Owing to the scarcity of money, we allow a discount of fifty cents when paid strictly in advance. This means at the beginning of the year, not after two or three or six months. In such cases we can not accept less than $2, as our rule is inflexible. Old subscribers can pay their subscription in advance anytime within 30 days after the expiration of the past year. This explanation is made to correct the impression that some have, that $1.50 is the price any time during the year.

See that your tickets are all right before going to the polls, and allow no one to change them for you on the way.

NEVER RETURN.

It is said that one out of every four real invalids who go to Denver, Col., to recover health, never return to the East or South except as a corpse. The undertakers, next to the hotel keepers, have the most profitable business. This excessive mortality may be prevented and patients saved and cured under the care of friends and loved ones at home, if they will but use Hop Bitters in time. This we know. See other column.

Clark Marple, son of the Rev. A. A Marple and grandson of the late William McKelvy, died at his home in Bridgeport, Penna. last Monday morning. He had suffered for several years from consumption, but submitted patiently and with christian fortitude to his inevitable fate. He was an exemplary young man and an earnest christian, and his loss will be keenly felt by many friends wherever he was known. The bereaved family have the sympathy of a large number of relatives and friends in this vicinity. The remains were brought to Bloomsburg, and interred in Rosemont Cemetery Thursday afternoon.

The storm on Wednesday October 23rd was one of unusual violence, doing an incalculable amount of damage, sweeping away a large amount of property and destroying many lives. From all along the Atlantic Coast reports have come in telling of many shipwrecks and of lives lost within sight of land. Nearly all of the towns and villages throughout Pennsylvania and the neighboring states can tell of trees blown down, roofs of houses blown off, and of bridges and houses entirely destroyed, in addition to a great amount of damage of less importance. The storm did not pass over Bloomsburg and its vicinity without doing some damage. Part of the slate roof of the Fifth street school house was blown off. The windows of the Normal School were damaged. Houses in different parts of the town after the storm had ceased were minus shutters and chimneys. The large cattle shed on the Armstrong farm above town was taken up by the wind and landed some distance from its original foundation.

DEMOCRATIC MEETINGS.

A Democratic meeting was held on Friday evening last at Joseph Shuman's hotel in Beaver Valley. There was a good turn-out of the Democracy, notwithstanding it was a night meeting. The speeches were made by W. H. Jacoby and John M. Clark, Esqrs., and were listened to with a great deal of interest. James T. Fox, Esq., presided, and Frank Rhodes and Edward Schell, were Secretaries. The meeting adjourned with three cheers for the speakers and three cheers for the whole Democratic ticket. Mr. Shuman deserves credit for having made arrangements so complete and perfect for the meeting. Beaver will do her level best for the success of the entire democratic ticket.

On Saturday evening last a Democratic meeting was addressed at Jerseytown by Charles G Barkley, Esq., and Col. John G. Freeze. Lewis Schuyler, Esq., presided, and Capt. W J. Allen and Isaac Whipple were Secretaries. The meeting was largely attended by an interested audience, which listened attentively to arguments of an hour's length by each speaker. The Jerseytown Brass Band was in attendance and enlivened the occasion with excellent music. The Democracy of Madison are alive and will perform their whole duty.

BERWICK MASS MEETING.

The Democratic mass meeting held at Berwick last Saturday, was a grand success. Early in the morning large delegations were seen to arrive in town, and as their eyes met the grand display of flags and the elegant Dill banners, their enthusiasm knew no bounds. At 11:30 o'clock, the speakers of the day arrived, Lieutenant Governor Latta, Hon. D. W. Cochran of Pittsburg, C. B. Brockway and C. R. Buckalew, coming with the delegation from Bloom, which arrived about noon accompanied by the delegations from Centre, Briarcreek and other townships. The old battle flag of Brockways battery, drew out immense applause as the delegations paraded the streets under the command of Chief Marshal F. E. Brockway. At 1 o'clock the Berwick band began to play at the large speakers stand, erected on Market street when within a short time the space around was filled with a large and appreciative audience. The speakers' talked at great length on the great question of finance, and hardtimes. After the speeches were over the band escorted the speakers to the train on which they left for other fields of labor. In the evening Capt. C. B. Brockway spoke to a large and intelligent audience in Odd Fellows Hall. The Captain made a good impression here and will have a nice and telling majority on the 5th of November in old Berwick, H.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy, for the permanent and speedy cure for consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering fellows, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, with full directions for preparing and using, in German, French, or English. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. W. Sherar, 149 Powers' Block, Rochester, New York. oct. 11, 4w

To the Voters of Columbia County:

A statement has been widely circulated that Fishingcreek School District was likely to come to considerable loss through Cyrus Robbins collector of School Taxes and now candidate for Register and Recorder of Columbia county. In consequence of the hard times Mr. Robbins has found it difficult to collect his duplicate in full without resort to levy and sale, not wishing to do so as long as he could avoid it, his duplicate is not yet collected in full, but at a meeting of School Board held Oct. 26, 1878 he satisfied the Board no loss could ensue for the small balance yet uncollected and by their orders will proceed to collect the balance before the expiration of his warrant, upon his doing so all will be satisfactory and those wishing to injure his prospect of an election silenced.

Attest: SAMUEL SMITH, Sec'y.

MR. GILES—Dear Sir: I have used your Iodide Ammonia Liniment and find it the best remedy I ever used. For a sprain or callous there is nothing equal to it. My wife sprained her ankle last Saturday evening; I used the Liniment as per directions; the second application was a perfect cure. Some of my friends started last night for Jackson Co., Kentucky they have taken several bottles with them. I have used it on my horses and it works like a charm. I am going to Kentucky next month—farming. If you have any works treating of horses and other animals, please send me two or three copies, and oblige.

IN THE WHOLE HISTORY OF MEDICINE.

No preparation has ever performed such marvellous cures, or maintained so wide a reputation, as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which is recognized as the world's remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs. Its long continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it universally known as a safe and reliable agent to employ. Against ordinary colds, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders, it acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering, and often saving life. The protection it affords, by its timely use in the throat and lung disorders of children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. From their knowledge of its composition and effects, Physicians use the Cherry Pectoral extensively in their practice, and Clergymen recommend it. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects, and will always cure where cures are possible.

Does Machinery Rob the Laborer.

The complaint that machinery robs the laborer of his only capital is entirely unfounded. Machinery never lessened the amount of work to be done, though it has constantly changed the character of the work. The labor-saving machinery employed in agriculture is almost entirely the product of the inventions of the past thirty years. In no part of the world has the introduction of such machinery been more general or more rapid than in the grain-growing States of the West. The result is shown in the census reports. During the ten years ending in 1860, the farm hands of those States increased in number more than fifty per cent. During the next ten, in spite of the losses of the war, the increase was about thirty per cent. During the same twenty years, the population of the country as a whole increased only sixty-seven per cent.

When Walter Hunt invented his sewing-machine in 1838, his wife protested that it would throw all the sewing women out of employment, and persuaded him to suppress it. Howe's, and Singer's, and no end of other machines, have come since then, and yet there is work for women to do. Notwithstanding the thousands of family machines in use, the number of persons earning a living with the sewing-machine in this country is to-day much greater in proportion to the population than was the number of tailors and sewing women before the invention of the machine, which a recent pretended labor-lover has classed with the steam-engine as one of the two worst evils that ever befel mankind. In noting its influence upon labor, we must not forget the 20,000 or more mechanics employed in our sewing-machine factories, and the thousands of others engaged in mining and making the iron, cutting and sawing the lumber, and in transporting and preparing these raw materials for the machines and their cases; nor the men employed in making the machinery used in the construction of sewing-machines, and in transporting and selling the finished product. Counting these, the invention appears in its true light as a great creator of labor; and the average wages of the persons directly or indirectly employed by the sewing-machine is doubtless four or five times that of the old-time sewers.

It is but a little while since a metropolitan paper of high rank pointed to the shoe business as furnishing a forcible illustration of the disastrous competition of machinery with men. The truth is, that while within twenty years, not less than eighty-five per cent. of the work done on factory boots and shoes has been turned over to machinery, there are to-day more men at work in shoe factories than then, and more than would now be employed except for machinery. It is but another illustration of the old industrial paradox. During these years of rapid progress in invention, the cost of materials has advanced, wages have nearly doubled, and the quality of factory boots and shoes has been improved twenty-five per cent.; yet the cost of manufacture has been so much reduced by new and improved machinery that American shoes have not only excluded the foreign made from our market, but have successfully invaded the markets of the whole world. As a natural consequence, many more shops are required not only in New England, but throughout the Middle States and the West; more workmen are employed in shoe-factories; higher wages are paid; and a great multitude of other men are furnished with employment in tanning the additional leather used, in packing and transporting and selling the additional product, and in making shoemakers' machinery and implements.—James Richardson, Scribner for November.

Worsted mitts, to wear over kid gloves in cold weather, are among the novelties. Gaily colored, richly embroidered with chenille and adorned with velvet bows, they will prove a stylish addition to the street toilets.

The Italians say that he who offends never forgives. Tacitus gives the reason for it. It is, he says, because the causes of hatred are the more violent the more unjust they are.

Artificial flowers are now sold in "sets" of four bunches. One little bunch is for the hair, one for the belt, another for the throat and still another to hang from the chatelaine.

ANTI-FAT

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT is the great remedy for Corpulency. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. It acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat. Taken according to directions, it will reduce a fat person from 2 to 5 pounds a week. In placing this remedy before the public as a positive cure for obesity, we do so knowing its ability to cure, as attested by hundreds of testimonials, of which the following from a lady in Columbus, Ohio, is a sample: "Gentlemen—Your Anti-Fat was duly received. I took it according to directions and it reduced me five pounds. I was so elated over the result that I immediately sent to ACKERMAN'S drug-store for the second bottle." Another, a physician, writing for a patient from Providence, R. I., says, "Four bottles have reduced her weight from 192 pounds to 162 pounds, and there is a general improvement in health." A gentleman writing from Boston, says: "Without special change or attention to diet, two bottles of Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me four and one-quarter pounds." The well-known Wholesale Druggists, SMITH, DOOLITTLE & SMITH, of Boston, Mass., write as follows: "Allan's Anti-Fat has reduced a lady in our city seven pounds in three weeks." A gentleman in St. Louis writes: "Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me twelve pounds in three weeks, and altogether I have lost twenty-five pounds since commencing its use." Messrs. POWELL & PLIMPTON, Wholesale Druggists, of Buffalo, N.Y., write: "To THE PROPRIETORS OF ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT: Gentlemen,—The following report is from the lady who used Allan's Anti-Fat. 'It (the Anti-Fat) had the desired effect, reducing the fat from two to five pounds a week until I had lost twenty-five pounds. I hope never to regain what I have lost.'" Anti-Fat is an unexcelled blood-purifier. It promotes digestion, curing dyspepsia, and is also a potent remedy for rheumatism. Sold by druggists. Pamphlet on Obesity sent on receipt of stamp.
